

Weiss-isms – part 2

by Phillip W. Weiss

(inspired by the words of Yogi Berra)

Why surrender when you can give up?

I'd rather eat carrots than vegetables.

A good woman is better than a good lady.

I'd rather have a friend than an amigo.

Why get married when you can get hitched?

A good law is better than any piece of legislation.

Someday the circle will be replaced by something round.

It's better to conduct business than commerce.

Why buy when you can purchase?

I'd rather keep something than store it.

It's better to have a plan than a strategy.

Evolution is better than change.

It's better to create something than to make it.

Cooking is better than baking.

Why wash when you can rinse?

Freezing is worse than being cold.

A home run is more impressive than a four-bagger.

People are human beings.

A thought is better than an idea.

It's better to ask than to inquire.

It's better to flex than to bend.

A mop should be damp instead of moist.

Why grab when you can clutch?

It's better to have a reason than a purpose.

It's better to own a house than a building.

It's better to stop than to cease.

A good laugh is better than a good chuckle.

A good meal is better than good food.

Striking out is better than whiffing at the plate.

It's better to retain a lawyer than an attorney.

I'd prefer going to court then litigate.

I'd rather swim in the water than in the ocean.

It's better to owe money than a debt.

I'd rather have a frankfurter than a hot dog.

Two fried eggs are better than two eggs fried.

I'd rather go home than stay in my house.

It's better to be confused than baffled.

Deal with a magistrate instead of a judge.

Always deal with the proprietor instead of the owner.

It's better to agree than to concur.

Just because you reside there does not mean you live there.

It's better to journey than to travel.

It's better to lease than to rent.
