

Cuurent Political Conditions in the United States

by Phillip W. Weiss

At the baseball game, the stadium posts the ages of the players on the score board. Many of the players were infants when 9/11 happened; ALL of the players were at most young children and few can recall what happened on that fateful day. To them, 9/11 is just another date. This also applies to the tens of millions of other young people for whom 9/11 means nothing. I firmly believe that if another 9/11 attack occurred, the nation would not unite like it did for awhile twenty-five years ago.

Many people in the United States hate the United States. Ironcially, the people who probably hate the US the least are the undocumented aliens who want to reside in the United States. The Marxist propaganda emanating from the schools and media has done its nefarious work of erioding confidence in our political system and in the legitmacy and fairness of our middle class values upon which our society is founded. The Democrat party openly expresses its hatred for the United States and if it could would transform the United States into a one-party socialist dictatorship that would mean the end of the United States.

The Democrat party will stop at nothing to bring down the United States. That party is now controlled by politicians who have embraced Marxism which believes that only means for achieving victory is through violence. The Marxist fiormula is simple: there are two classes,the workers and the oppressors who control the means of production. The latter have all power. The only way to destroy their power is through struggle.

Struggle means resorting to violence. With time, the violence will work, the oppressor class will crumble and the workers will take charge and through their leaders create a new society free from oppression and injustice. That's it, the entire formula in a nutshell. Karl Marx based his theory of social development on an earlier theory called dialectical materialism concocted by a German philosopher named Hegel. The victory of the working class is inevitable. It is not a question of if but only of when. The Dems believe that time is on their side.

Marxism provides every social freak, wacko and criminal the ideological justification to act out with impunity and act out they do. Nothing can stop them. Sometimes they are forced to go into hiding, like a disease in remission, but they never disappear. They lay in wait until conditions allow them to reemerge and incite. That's the way it is. It's bad enough that some people are nasty and vicious but it is much worse and outright lethal when nastiness and viciousness are provided ideological justification. That produces a political movement that embraces violence as a legitimate political tool for achieving social change, and once set into motion, it acquired a momentum that can wipe away entire civilizations, leaving in its wake desolation and despair.
