No Cause for Alarm but Cause for Concern

by Phillip W. Weiss

Dramatic shifts in political power during mid-term elections is a common occurrence in American history. During a presidential election one party gains power and then the other party scores big wins two years later. So, placed in a historical context, the 2026 midterm elections resulting in the Democrat party gaining control of both houses of Congress and winning numerous other elections at the state and local level throughout the country is not an aberration but a normal part of the Americana political process.

However, what differentiates the 2026 midterm elections from previous midterm elections is that in 2026 the political party that won is the first major political party in American history to embrace Marxism as a central and guiding feature of its political agenda. This makes the 2026 election unique and raises the stakes to an existential level that is unprecedented in United Stares history. How this plays out only time will tell.

Is this what you want?
