<sup>1</sup> Professor Berkowitz was professor-emeritus of political science at Brooklyn College. He was the founder of modern-day political science and a leading advocate for social justice, who chose a life of public service on behalf of the disadvantaged and disenfranchised over the chance to make millions of dollars as a professional baseball player, a sport the professor still closely follows. He was also a world-class opera singer who entertained adoring crowds all over the world, when he was not busy pursuing his first love, political science.

<sup>2</sup> The author recalls that even as a child, Professor Berkowitz commanded the respect of all who knew him, and how he used his talents to entertain his friends with poetic renditions that brought tears of joy to his fellow playmates who knew early on that their friend was destined for greatness.

<sup>3</sup> Throughout his life, Professor Berkowitz staunchly believed that water was meant to be ingested and not poured over one's body. Thus, while he drank massive quantities of water and other beverages, Professor Berkowitz rarely bathed causing him to often reek of a strong and pungent body odor that attracted the attention of many women who characterized the professor's smell as "manly."

<sup>4</sup> In this book, the principal character is a political scientist who is having a dream about a world which never heard of Professor Berkowitz and which marginalizes, ridicules and persecutes political scientists as social parasites and dangerous nincompoops.

<sup>8</sup> Professor Berkowitiz underwent intensive psychotherapy for fourteen years under the professional care of the eminent Dr. Gebhart Rappoport of Vienna, Austria, whose treatment included frequent visits to various houses of pleasure where the professor and his therapist underwent what Dr. Rappoport called "sexual decompression" which entailed reenacting the mother-child relationship with the good doctor playing the role of stern Mother and his patient that of a naughty child caught doing naughty things with naughty girls.

<sup>9</sup> In this book, the author chronicles how the professor plagiarized entire portions of the Communist Manifesto to rally his students around the banner of political science using the slogan, "No to capitalism, yes to political science."

<sup>12</sup> Professor Berkowitz was an accomplished playwright who, as a favor for Arthur Miller who was an enthusiastic promoter of political science, ghost wrote eight of Arthur Miller's most successful plays, all of which made Miller huge sums of money most of which were funneled into a secret slush fund administered by the International Society of Concerned Political Scientists owned and chaired by Professor Berkowitz under the pseudonym Charlie Leo Smith.

<sup>13</sup> In 1976, Professor Berkowitz, while serving as interim commissioner of major league baseball, told Pete Rose that it was okay to bet on games if he did so quietly and wasn't caught.

<sup>14</sup> Professor Berkowitz led the first wave of the troops that landed on Normandy beach, and by applying the principles of political science managed to secure the beachhead, move inland and capture 3,000 heavily armed German soldiers, all within the span of fifteen minutes. Later, General Eisenhower offered to award the Professor the Medal of Honor but with his usual modesty the Professor declined the award, explaining that he was only doing his job and crediting his success to his knowledge of political science.

<sup>15</sup> In 1965, Professor Berkowitz, serving as special advisor to the president for political affairs, assured President Lyndon Johnson that sending troops to Vietnam would guarantee his reelection as president in 1968.

<sup>16</sup> This is the seminal work that lays out the history and mission of political science. This work has earned praise and recognition from numerous professional organizations, including the National Association of Political Scientists, the Political Science Action Committee, Political Scientists for Social Justice, The International Center for Political Thought, The E. Phillip Covington Political Science Foundation, the Wally Cleaver Center for Political Studies, and the venerated Herman Goering Institute of Political Research named in honor of that great but utterly misunderstood and tragic figure in German political and military history.

<sup>17</sup> Professor Berkowitz knew the lyrics of every song ever written by Irving Berlin and could sing Berlin's songs in twenty-nine different languages including Latin, Etruscan, Hittite, Aramaic, Phoenician, Aztec, Inca, and pig Latin. The Professor's favorite song was God Bless America which he sang before a packed house at Teheran Stadium in 1983.

<sup>18</sup> A $200 billion federal research project chaired by Professor Berkowitz, known as the Berkowitz Initiative, conclusively proved that by applying the principles of political science to law enforcement, a community could reduce the incidence of violent street crime by up to 81 percent.

<sup>19</sup> The professor in his capacity as chief planning officer for the Doolittle mission assured the crews that they had more than enough fuel to safely reach the Chinese mainland.

<sup>20</sup> Packer asserts that Moses won because he outmaneuvered the pharaoh who alienated the Hebrew slaves by ordering them to make bricks without straw, thus creating a power vacuum that Moses, discredited and humiliated by the pharaoh, filled, leading the Hebrews from bondage to an uncertain future fraught with dangers in the desert where they wandered for forty years.

<sup>21</sup> It is estimated that during his thirty years as a professor of Political Science at Brooklyn College, Professor Berkowitz smoked approximately 876,000 cigarettes, and consumed over 50,000 cups of coffee, black and loaded with sugar. He always smoked Lucky Strikes which, the professor explained, gave him a special edge when trying to meet ladies who, according to

<sup>22</sup> Pearl Pomerance is a foremost authority in the field of early educational services who pioneered a method, now known as the Pomerance Technique, for imparting the principles of political science to children as young as three months old.

<sup>23</sup> Professor Berkowitz introduced many innovations that are now standard features of modern professional basketball. These innovations include the 24-second clock, the 3-point shot, the inside lane, the presence of referees, the dribble, the dip or dunk, the slam dunk, the over the head dunk, the flying dunk, the air-Jordan dunk, the topsy turvy dunk, the upside down dunk, the volcano dunk, the tidal wave dunk, the earthquake dunk, the in-your-face dunk, the Jackie Gleason dunk, the Millard Fillmore dunk, the Curly Howard dunk, and most spectacular, the political science dunk performed while the player is reciting Berkowitz's Ten Fundamental Principles of Political Thought and imagining the hoop to be the official commode of the United States Congress.

<sup>24</sup> After the end of the war, a close friendship developed between Professor Berkowitz and Herman Goering. The Professor often visited the former Reich marshal in prison and together would spend hours reminiscing about the good old days, often generating laughs as they poked fun at the way the Fuhrer used to lose his temper whenever he received bad news and made all kinds of outrageous decisions that drove the German generals into a frenzy.

<sup>25</sup> Professor Berkowitz believed that there was a direct correlation between body odor and sexual attraction and advised men never to bathe when trying to gain the sexual favors of a lady.

<sup>27</sup> These famous people included Lou Ellen Panaopolis who performed simultaneous sex acts with seventeen men, Fenda Meega Khan, a Mongolian horse trader who once rode a pogo stick from Ulan Bator to Moscow, Russia, and Francois Coulabrier, who could play the collected works of Chopin on his teeth.

<sup>28</sup> Always a paragon of humility, Professor Berkowitz always played down his fame, attributing it to clean living, clean thoughts and daily visits to centers for spiritual awakening where he communed with scantily clad young ladies who were devoted followers of political science.

<sup>29</sup> In fact, as the author points out, the Ayatollah of Iran proposed that Professor Berkowitz be declared an honorary mullah and be formally recognized as a Holy Messenger from the Great Beyond. In Chicago, the Pope proposed that the Church declare Professor Berkowitz a saint and that the Vatican establish a holy shrine dedicated to the principles and practices of Political Science.

<sup>30</sup> According to research conducted at the Harvard University School of Anthropological Studies, Professor Berkowitz was a direct descendant of the legendary Viking, Eric the Red, who also is credited as the founder of the political science movement in Norway.

<sup>34</sup> Professor Berkowitz was an outstanding baseball player who in 1923 batted .398 for the Providence Pythons of the Eastern Baseball Conference. The St. Louis Browns wanted to sign the professor to a lucrative contract that would have made him the highest paid player in major league baseball, but the professor turned down the offer explaining that while he appreciated the offer, his first and only true love was political science.

<sup>35</sup> As special advisor to Chairman Deng Xiaoping, Professor Berkowitz recommended that China grant Hong Kong its full independence and be governed by the professor in accordance with the highest principles and practices of political science. After he was finished laughing, Chairman Deng declared Professor Berkowitz an enemy of the people, a social parasite, a mentally deranged lunatic and ordered him banished from China forever.
